“ I think I could spend weeks writing a post about all the things Uncle Ron was to me and the memories we have together, and I think he would love that, but I don't think I'd even be able to touch the surface on who he was to me and all of the things we shared. Uncle Ron was undoubtedly one of the most generous and selfless people I knew. He was never more than a phone call away, even though I've always been states away he had a way of making me feel like he was right there. One of my favorite things I shared with him was a love of coffee. He was the one who gave me my first cup and made sure I never told Jojo about what we ate at McDonalds and taught me how to savor every sip. I am grateful I get to make him apart of everyday still. I miss and love you so much Uncle Ron.

“ Uncle Ron was a great man. I remember our first trip to McDonald's and why we had to lie to JoJo about where we went. I am so glad he got to share that with my girls too! I think my most memorable and funniest time was when he was going to teach me how to play golf. We went outside and was getting ready he showed me how to hold the club and how to swing it so I was confident. I got ready and as soon as I swing back I knocked his head light out on his red pick up truck. Needless to say I never got to play golf again he was so pissed but to this day I still laugh about it. He loves Jesus and his church. I will miss talking about football and doctors with you. Love you uncle Ron
